| 교과목 해설 | Law provides important incentives and constraints for the decisions of people and firms. This course analyzes how legal rules affect people's behaviors as well as market outcomes by applying standard microeconomic toolbox. Also, it appraises whether current legal rules meet the social goal of efficiency. | | | | | | |
| 강의진행 방법 | The aim of this course is to understand laws regarding property, tort, contract, and crime by using microeconomic tools. Because this course is interdisciplinary, students are expected to integrate many ideas to understand laws. Since each student is required to make a presentation during the semester, students may want to draw on their creativity to make presentation materials and clearly deliver the messages. The lecture proceeds fast, so I recommend that students diligently review and preview course materials. Extra credits are available for volunteering answers, so being proactive is a plus. Students from several countries take this course, so students are encouraged to use English as much as possible. We start with the importance of institutions for economic development and some microeconomic tools. Then, we apply these tools to each area of laws and understand related examples. Microeconomics is only one way to understand laws, however. For illustration purposes, we discuss rape, prostitution, and murder by relying on other disciplines. | | | | | | |
