교과목표 및 개요	This course surveys fictions written by major British and American writers. The general objective of the course is to introduce students to a range of topics and methodologies which help characterize the British and American literature. The most important core skill we will learn in this course will be close-reading, improvement of listening skill and critical understanding of literature in the lieu of connections among your life experience, critical analysis, and literary works' intertextuality with historical, social, ethical, philosophical, cultural, and ethnic contexts. I will provide various handouts to help you broaden and deepen your expertise on critical understanding of American and British fictions.
수업운영 방식	lectures, questions, presentations, and discussion This class will be conducted in English.  As a flipped learning class, there will be on-line lectures that aim to enhance your undersatnding of literature and give guidence on preparing Teacher Employment Exam. You have to watch these on-line video lectures, which will be counted as a part of your participation score.  *Assessment will consist of four elements: Presentation (30%) Mid-term Exam (30%), On-line and off-line Particiation (40%).  This class will be managed in flipped learning style class. Each day we will do mainly small group or whole class discussions talking about on-line lecture or other materials we deal with during the semester. I, as a teacher, will just facilitate your discussions. Yet, there will be short lectures and presentations also.
